He's Just Not That into You

By Greg Behrendt and Liz Tuccillo

(Pg 7) Hey. I know the guy you're dating. Yeah, I do. He's that guy that's so tired from work, so stressed about the project he's working on. He's just been through an awful breakup. He has trust issues. Right now he has to focus on his career. He can't get involved with anyone until he knows what his life is about. As soon as it all calms down he'll leave his wife, girlfriend, crappy job. God, he's so complicated.

He is a man made up entirely of your excuses. And the minute you stop making excuses for him, he will completely disappear from your life.

INTRODUCTION

For ages women have come together to analyze the puzzling behavior of men. "He's afraid to get hurt again." "Maybe he's intimidated by me." "He just got out of a relationship." But no matter how many excuses for a dead-end relationship you try to make, the truth may be . . . He's Just Not That into You by Greg Behrendt and Liz Tuccillo.

R EDUCATIONAL

4NG Fanatics

(Pg 23) He's just not that into you if he's not calling you – Men know how to use the phone.

Oh, sure, they say they're busy. They say that they didn't have even a moment in their insanely busy day to pick up the phone. Bulls. With the advent of cell phone and speed dialing, it is almost impossible not to call you. Sometimes I call people from my pants pocket when I don't even mean to.

(Pg 26-28) Dear Greg: I'm dating this guy who ends conversations saying he'll call me. Like, "I'll give you a call tomorrow." And then he doesn't. Should I read something into this? - Annie

Dear Call Waiting: Yes, you should read something into it. In fact the very something is . . "He's just not that into you." Most guys will say what they think you want to hear rather than nothing at all. Some guys are lying; some guys really mean it. Here's how you can tell the difference: You know they mean it when they actually do what they said they were going to do. You should be dating a man who's at least as good as his word.

(Pg 29-30) Dear Greg: A guy who I'm going out with is totally important and totally busy. Sometimes when he's working, I don't hear from him for days and days. Some guys are just really, really busy! - Nikki

Dear Nikki: Really busy is another way to say "just not that into you." Totally important is another way to say, "you're unimportant." Too busy and important to ask you out or call you – what a catch. You must be the envy of every women he's really dating.

I'm about to make a wild, extreme, and severe relationship rule: The word "busy" is a load of crap and is most often used by aholes. The word "busy" is the relationship Weapon of Mass Destruction. Men are never too busy to get what they want.

(Pg 36) He's just not that into you if he's not dating you: Hanging out is not dating!

(Pg 39-40) Dear Greg: I've been dating a guy for six months. We see each other about every two weeks. I really like him, so I feel like it's better than nothing.

HNG Fanatics

And you never know things can change at any time. Maybe I should actually feel honored that he's able to give me as much time as he does – He might actually really like me. – Lydia

Dear Better than Nothing: Really? Is better than nothing what we're going for now? Have you lost your marbles? Why should you feel honored for getting scraps of his time. In my book, any guy who can wait two weeks to see you is just not that into you. (Pg 45) Better than nothing is not good enough!

(PG 59) He's just not that into you if he cheats on you – There's never going to be a good excuse for cheating.

Some will argue that you shouldn't throw away a meaningful relationship just because of one indiscretion. And in case he tells you that it just "happened," please remember, cheating doesn't just "happen." It's not an accident as in, "Oops, I just slipped and fell." He is not only behaving like a man who's just not that into you, he's behaving like a man who doesn't even like you all that much.

FOR EDUCATIONAL USE ONLY

(Pg 61-62) Dear Greg: I had been dating a guy for about two years, and I thought things were going really well. After he came home from a family visit, he told me [cheated on me] He told me I had put on some weight and therefore he wasn't that attracted to me anymore. I have put on about 20 pounds. Should I break up with him or start going to the gym? -- Beth

Dear Twenty Pounds: I definitely think you should lose 175 pounds – in the form of your loser boyfriend. He just cheated on you and called you fat. Using your weight as an excuse for his cheating is not only mean, but simply not valid. And by the way, how's he going to react if you grow older and get a few wrinkles? Or wear a color he doesn't like?

(Pg 63) NOTE: Pronouns changed from plural to singular. This last guy is good. He's betrayed his relationship and humiliated his girlfriend. Then he tells her it's all her fault, knowing that he has just done something that has so demoralized her that she will be inclined to believe a load of horse crap. Don't let any man blame you for their infidelity. Ever! (PG 68) There is no excuse for cheating. Let me say it again. There is no excuse for cheating.

4NG Fanatics

(Pg 93) He's just not that into you if he's breaking up with you.

(Pg 98-99) Dear Greg: I have a boyfriend who keeps breaking up with me. He also keeps calling me and begging me to get back together. He's done this three times now, every six months. I hate it, but I keep taking him back because I love him. He must be really into me if he keeps coming back, right? -- Christina

Dear Yo-Yo Champion: I'll put money down that the breakup count isn't over yet. Sadly, this is what that guy is doing during your relationship recess. He's [looking] around for something better, and when he doesn't find it, he gets lonely and comes "home. Reset your breakup maximum to one and move one.

Just remember that the person you are getting back together with is the same person who, not long before, looked you in your beautiful face, took full stock of you and all your qualities, and told you that he was no longer in need of your company. If aliens haven't recently abducted your beloved and switched his brain for the brain of a guy who's really into you, please consider the option that the bum maybe just got a little lonely.

FOR EDUCATIONAL USE ONLY

(Pg 130) He's just not that into you if he's a selfish jerk

(Pg 134) Dear Greg: I am dating a guy in medical school. He's overworked, over tired and gets angry easily. He recently screamed at me because I was bothering him when he was in the middle of studying. I know that this is just temporary. And every once in a while he'll feel bad and apologize and tell me how much pressure he's under. He wasn't like this in the beginning and I know the real guy is going to come back. Besides, I always wanted to marry a doctor! -- Denise

Dear Old Yeller: I don't care if he's studying to become the next Messiah. There is no reason to yell at anyone ever, unless you are screaming "LOOK OUT FOR THAT BUS!" And it's not temporary. People who yell are people who think they're entitled to yell. Don't wait around for Mr. Hyde to turn back into Dr. Jekyll.

4NG Fanatics

(PG 145) You want to believe that you are better than all the crap you've been taking from all these men all these years? Well you are. (Front cover) You're a beautiful, smart, funny woman who deserves better. (Pg 148) Life is hard enough as it is without choosing someone difficult to share it with. (Front cover) So . . . The next time you feel the need to start "figuring him out" consider the glorious thought that maybe He's just not that into you and then go find the one who is.

SOURCE INFORMATION

Author: Greg Behrendt and Liz Ruccillo
ISBN: 978-0689874741
Publisher: Simon Spotlight Entertainment
Date (Month/Year): Sept 2004

AWARD HISTORY

2005 National Qualifier
2007 National Qualifier

FOR EDUCATIONAL USE ONLY