Five Things White People Love

by Trevor Noah

I had a fight with my friend [the other day]. He's like, "Dude, why don't we go check out all the museums."

I was like, "Maybe like one."

He said, "What do you mean, one? You know how many amazing museums they got?"

"Yes, but it's still a museum. I'll do like one, and that's it. I can't do as many as you."

"What do you mean you can't do as many as me?"

"Dude, because you're white, like, you enjoy doing that." And I was just joking. I was just teasing him. Just teasing him. He got so offended so quickly, right?

He's like, "What did you say? Because you're. . . Dude, white people don't love museums. "What are you even talking about? Like, museums aren't even in the top five things white people love, okay?"

He said it with such confidence. and with such conviction, I was like, "What is the top five?" I thought about it. I was like, "No, it is." I stick with my decision.

INTRODUCTION

Five Things White People Love from The Netflix Comedy Special Where I Was by Trevor Noah

White people love museums. A lot of people enjoy museums, but white people love museums. Love museums. There's not a single place on Earth where white people have settled and not built a museum. It doesn't matter. White people love museums. You ever seen white people in a museum? Walking around smiling with their hands behind their back? "Yep, that was us." "That was us, too." "It's been a good run." White people love museums. I wouldn't put it at number one, but it'd be in the top five. I thought about it. If there were top five things white people love, I'd put museums at number five. At number four, I'd put swimming. All right? 'Cause white people love swimming. Nothing wrong with that. Have you seen white people swim? You look stunning. Stunning. When white people swim, you do that thing with your hair. You come out of the water, like. . . (imitates whooshing and a dramatic hair toss)

Just go perfectly back like a duck. I would love swimming, too. White people love swimming. White people love swimming so much, that they made it that you can win more medals at the Olympics, swimming, than any other discipline. Yeah, that's how much white people love swimming. I realized this one day. There was an argument going on about who the greatest Olympian of all time is. And the final two was Michael Phelps and Usain Bolt. And then one of the arguments was, "Well, Michael Phelps is better because he has more medals." And I was like, "Yeah, because he cheated -- He won them swimming." I'm not saying Michael Phelps is not great. I'm saying you can't count the medals in the argument. Because in swimming it's the only discipline where you win more medals for doing the same thing in a slightly less efficient manner. It makes no sense. Think about it. It's like, "100-meter freestyle." (imitates beep)

[panting] Done. Gold medal. Yeah. And now this. (demonstrates another swimming style) Another medal. Yeah. And this one? (another style demonstration) Another medal. But what about this one? (another style demonstration) Another medal. That's some bull. I don't care what anyone says. You can't win more medals. Usain Bolt doesn't have that luxury. When Usain Bolt runs, it's the 100-meter and it's done. "On your marks, set. . . Run, run, run, run. Get to the end, win, gold medal. That's it. He can't turn around like, "Amazing race. And now I'm going to do it butterfly style." (demonstrates a ridiculous running style) It's not a thing. I mean, it should be, but it's not. White people love swimming, so they made up the rule. I get it. It would have to be, yeah. Of my top five things, I'd go -- museums at number five, swimming at number four.

Number three, being flabbergasted. White people love being flabbergasted. Come on. You know exactly what I'm talking about. Have you ever seen when a white person's having a bad day, something's gone wrong, they do that thing with their face, get flabbergasted like. . .

(extreme facial expressions, hand gestures) White people love being flabbergasted. You'll see it in supermarkets all the time. There's like a long line. All right? But only one cashier is open. Everyone's standing patiently. There's always one white person who pops out like. . . (with extreme facial expressions, hand gestures) "Why don't they open the other. . . Are you serious? What are they. . . Are you. . ." The only thing white people love more is finding another white person to flabbergast with. Have you seen that? Yo, whenever that happens, magic. It is absolute magic. A white person will be flabbergasting. They'll make eye contact with another white person, and then they'll flabbergast together. It's like they Voltron their flabbergasting into a super flabbergast. You see them look over. (extreme facial expressions, hand gestures) "You see this?" "I know." (sighing) That's one of the keys to flabbergasting. You have to exhale. Let it all out. Life is so hard that the air has to leave your body. You can no longer even breathe. (sighing heavily) That's why there's so many tornadoes in the Midwest. It's just white people flabbergasting. . . (sighing vigorously)

White people love being flabbergasted. Has to be. Has to be top five. That would be my list. Top five things white people love. I've got museums at number five. All right, swimming at number four. Being flabbergasted, number three.

Number two, being white. It's a sweet gig. I don't blame you.

And then there's number one. And look, this is my personal list. I'm not dictating anything. If you don't agree, make your own, right? It's a personal preference. But there is one thing, and one thing alone, that white people love more than anything on this planet. "Sweet Caroline." Let me tell you something. There is nothing that brings more joy to the soul of a white person than the sounds of that Neil Diamond song. I don't care where it is. I've been on every continent, in many countries. When that song plays, you see white people's eyes light up. . . like sleeper agents who've just been activated. It happens every time, without fail. Every single time. It's not about music, other songs will be playing. They'll be at a cookout or a baseball game, a company event. All the other songs are in the background. They pay them no heed. But when that song kicks in, it taps into the very DNA of whiteness. I don't know what it is. But it interrupts everything else. You'll see white people hanging out. They'll be like,

"Yeah, business, mergers and acquisitions."

"It's one of those things."

"I know, we should circle back."

"Let's put a pin in it." (blabbering)

And that song comes in, and every single time. . . You think it won't happen. It always creeps in. It always seems like it won't happen. But it's always the same, just like. . . . (sings)

♪ Hands, touchin' hands ♪

♪ Reachin' out, touchin' me ♪

♪ Touchin' you Pum, pum, pum ♪

♪ Sweet Caroline ♪

See, I didn't tell you to join in. I didn't say, "All together now." Or, "On the count of three." That was just your whiteness coming out. Did you feel that? Huh? That was just you. You were like, "This is it!" "This is our moment!" (to the tune of Sweet Caroline) ♪ Oh, oh, oh ♪ ♪ I'm white, white, white ♪ ♪ White, white ♪♪ Look at you right now. You're beaming! Look at your face. Look at you. Don't ever lose that joy. None of you white people. You hold on to it. It is a treasure. It is the most adorable thing in the world.

Nothing makes white people happier than that song. Nothing. That song is pure, uncut Caucasian joy. That's what that song is. White people cannot resist it. Yeah, forget 23andMe. If you want to know how much white you have in you, play that song. The louder you respond, the whiter you are. I just saved you some money. There's no white person I've seen. . . It is the Marco to your Polo. That's what that song is. I'll tell you, if there was ever, like, a giant earthquake, God forbid, and people were trapped beneath the rubble, I'd volunteer to find all the white people. I'll be like, "You guys find everybody else." "I got this. I got this!"

♪ “Sweet Caroline” ♪ “I found another one!” “You okay, man?”

SOURCE INFORMATION

Author:  Trevor Noah
ISBN: On-Line Transcript
https://scrapsfromtheloft.com/comedy/trevor-noah-where-was-i-transcript/
Publisher: Scraps From the Loft.com
Date (Month/Year): December 21, 2023

AWARD HISTORY

MN State Qualifier

*From his 2023 Netflix Comedy Special Where I Was

Sweet Caroline Words and Lyrics
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZLPiYZrwAzU

FOR EDUCATIONAL USE ONLY