RAINBOW SKULL

The Perfect Son

By Elijah Sams and Brian Sams

Characters:
MS: Mad Scientist. A good guy, raised wrong.
T: His project/son.
C: Chad/Igor. A bro.
D: Dmitri, Russian mad scientist. Competes with MS
V: Dmitri's daughter. Wants to act. Shy?
H: Hans. Bavarian mad scientist. Underdog complex.
J: Jaeger. Hans's robot son. Likes poetry.
BA: Blake Allenson
P: Principal Brown
CM: Coach Manosfuertes. Spanish soccer coach forced to coach football.

MS: (Moving around the room, frantically adjusting apparatus) Soon I will know if I have succeeded in my quest to create a teenage son! I will finally know once and for all whether I have created a primarily nocturnal, disorganized, remorseless eating machine…or if I have failed. Igor, throw the switch!

C: Bra, I told you, my name is Chad, bro.

MS: Do you want to go back where I found you, Igor? Working the fragrance counter at a Hollister?

C: Fine, dude, I'll throw your freakin' switch, bra.

T: (Groans, rolls over, etc)

MS: It's alive!

T: (Groans again.)

MS: I said "It's alive!" Wake up!

T: Seriously? It's barely daylight.

MS: It's 3 pm.

T: Wait, how did I get here? Where did I come from?

MS: Ah, the birds and the bees! How I've longed to have this conversation… However, it totally doesn't apply. Due to my limited dating options as a mad scientist, my only chance at an offspring was to create you from the DNA of hundreds of the most accomplished people in the world and upload the entire internet into your brain, thus creating the Perfect Son!

T: I've got the entire internet in here?

MS: Well, not really. Like 3/8ths. I left out the porn and anything with (current pop culture topic - i.e the Kardashians, etc.). There wasn't that much left.

Intro: You've heard about helicopter parents, and even bulldozer parents; parents that do everything they can to ensure that their kids turn out perfect, yet sometimes those kids rebel and become complete trainwrecks. Meanwhile, other parents do next to nothing and produce model citizens. Raising kids is guesswork, constant adjustments, and damage control. It's an art, not a science. But what if it didn't have to be? The Perfect Son.

MS: There's no time to waste, school starts in a few days and we have to get you signed up for everything! You'll be the best athlete, scholar and artist in the country!

T: Really? I'm not sure I want to be "The Best"

MS: And waste your life? No, no, no. I won't fail you the way my father failed me. Locked away in his lab while I slaved away in the brain fields of our organ farm.

T: You did what where?

MS: I said the grain fields of our organic farm. Never reaching my full potential, forced to be a mad scientist when I always dreamed of being a frontrunner for the Republican Party Presidential nomination.

T: Actually, that seems pretty doable right now. Look, Dad, I really don't see how I'm going to do all these activities, I mean I show up out of nowhere…

MS: You already know how to do everything! Sports? No problem! Music? Easy! Academics? Piece of cake! The level of cheating I've done here makes Lance Armstrong look like a boyscout! Besides, I made some considerable donations at the last bake sale! They owe me!

T: OK, great. Dad, here's the deal. I don't want to sign up for these activities and…

MS: …and you don't see how I can make you? Haha! That's where you're wrong! I built in a little special something… The Parental Guiltinator 2000! A couple little tweaks of the joysticks, and… (Using Xbox style controls, takes control of T's body.)

T: What the? Dad!

MS: (Executes some 80s breakdancing type robot moves…) I'm doing this because I love you.

T: Stop doing that and I'll go!

MS: Excellent! We'll take my transitionator! My driving license is suspended.

TRANSITION

MS: And here we are… What should you sign up for first? A sport? Yearbook? Your college applications are going to be perfect, not like mine, all I had on mine was Future Homemakers of America.

T: Hey, have you ever heard of Pinocchio? Shouldn't I be learning right from wrong, developing a conscience and learning to love?

MS: Will any of those earn you a full ride scholarship to an Ivy League School?

T: No.

MS: Then, no. Ooh, there's my archnemesis, Dmitri. He thinks he's a better mad scientist than I. Wait til he sees you!

D: Hello, Victor. And what have we here?

MS: My son! All the latest biogengineering, he's been designed to…

D: …then let me introduce my super daughter! Veronica! Her position as Valedictorian is assured! Veronica, explain quantum theory, now!

V: Father, I don't think…

Principal: It's good to see all your happy, smiling faces here. I'm Principal Brown. Gonna get you all signed up for these great activities. Gonna make me look real good at the principal's convention. Might even win a Princy this year. I hope you had a chance to meet Mr. Allenson, our drama director…

V: I would like to meet drama director!

BA: Good day! I'm Blake Allenson! I've directed four plays and only suffered three nervous breakdowns! Arsenic and Old Lace was a breeze I tell you! A breeze!

T: Wow. Are you British?

BA: No, old chap, I'm Dramatic!

T: Because it sounds like a British…

BA: I'm ACTING!

D: This is waste of time. Real students have no time for to make pretend…

P: Well, perhaps I could introduce you to our head football coach, Coach Manosfuertes…

CM: Hola! I am coach Manosfuertes. En los Estados Unidos, futbol is called soccer. Manosfuertes should have never taken this job…

T: I don't think I'm interested in football. Maybe sports aren't my thing.

MS: Nonsense, I've made certain… Great googly moogly…

Jaeger: (Enters with much robotic nonsense.) I want to sign up for football. I will crush my opponents. I will hear the lamentations of their fans.

MS: Hans! What have you done?

Hans: Vhat? Everyone else was bringing zeir superchildren to school. This is my son, Jaeger.

D: Da. Children. This is not children. Is 1000 pound robot.

H: I'm an engineer, not a biologist!!

J: Father? What is this feeling that burns inside? Making Jaeger want to hide? Like a tiny mouse, inside a tiny house!

D: What is this? Poetry? You make rhyme?

J: These are my words…

V: Is nice.

T: Yeah, that's cool, Jaeger.

H: He's very sensitive. On ze way here, he accidentally stepped on an old woman's dog.

J: I almost cried. My heart, it died. I had killed the little doggy and my soul it felt so…so…

V: Foggy?

T: Groggy?

J: Just wait, Jaeger will find word.

T: Dad, I don't know what I was thinking when I didn't want to come here, this is awesome.

MS: This is not awesome. How will you become the most accomplished student in the school like this?

D: Veronica will be most accomplished student in school! Veronica! Destroy puny male!

T: What? I don't even want to be the most accomplished student in the school!

V: Father, I don't want to be the most…

D: (Taking out controller) You will do as I say!

MS: Oooh, is that a Parental Guiltinator 2000?

D: It is the 2001, with Extended Familial Obligation Overdrive!

H: I vant in on this, too! Jaeger! Crush!

MS: Let's do this! (Takes out his controller as well.)

T: (Now under MS's control, at least physically.) Oh, yeah, like this is for my own good!

MS: Of course it's for your own good! My father never let me do anything! I'm making sure you do everything!

(Everyone gears up/powers up for battle)

V: I'm sorry, I only ever wanted to be in a play, but now it seems I must tear you to shreds with my bare hands.

J: And I only want to rhyme words, like birds, in the sky, so high…Now you must die.

P: Manosfuertes, please contact emergency services. sigh Well, there goes my Princy.

T: Wait! Wait! Hold on! Is this really what you want to do? We're just kids, why pit us against each other? Shouldn't we just pursue our own dreams and goals and not worry what other kids are doing? Are you just trying to live through us or do you really care about our happiness? Why do we have to be superchildren? Why can't we just be children?

BA: Bravo! Bravo! What a display! Blake Allenson approves!

M: Si! El nino es correcto! His noble declaration has brought a tear to the mighty Manosfuerte's eye.

T: How about you just leave us kids here, and we'll just decide on our own if we want to do an activity?

MS: My father would have never let me just…Ah, I see. Dmitri, Hans, let's leave these kids here and talk outside. For example, how did you both show up with superchildren the same day as me? Were you spying on me?

D: We follow on the Tiktok.

H: You live streamed ze whole thing…

MS: OK, kids, have fun. We'll go out for ice cream afterwards! We can take the transitionator!

T: Alright, Dad! So, what do you guys really want to do?

V: I vant to act!

J: I want to fill notebooks with angsty teen robot poetry!

T: I don't really know what I want to do…

BA: Blake Allenson! That was quite a monologue just now. Have you ever considered the noble art of acting?

MS: Yes! Sign him up!

T: Dad!

MS: Sorry! Sorry. It's hard to stop. Ah, this is an excellent opportunity to try the conclusion setting on the transitionator! You just push this button, and…
