Narrator #1 (F): She is a prim and proper narrator, just like typical fairy-tale narrators. A 'fancy' accent is encouraged.

Narrator #2 (F): She is less traditional than Narrator #1, preferring strong characters like Rose Red.

Snow White (As told by Narrator #1): She is polite and kind. She is the picture of a perfect maiden.

Rose Red (As told by Narrator #1): She is rude and inconsiderate. She only cares about herself.

Snow White (As told by Narrator #2): She thinks very highly of herself and expects the world to revolve around her.

Rose Red (As told by Narrator #2): She is very stoic and brave. She cares a lot about her sister, no matter how rude she is.

Author's Note: The person who plays Narrator #1 should also play Rose Red. The person who plays Narrator #2 should also play Snow White.

Fairytale Feud

NARRATOR #1: Good evening, dearest reader. I am the Narrator, and I am here to tell you a magnificent tale of losses, fear, and love. This is the story of Snow White.

NARRATOR #2: Um, yawn. Don't you mean the story of Rose Red? Snow White's just the one who got all the attention.

NARRATOR #1: Rose Red is… quite irrelevant. I doubt the reader has even heard of her.

NARRATOR #2: Well, that's my point exactly. How do you expect them to know about her when she's so grossly overshadowed by her snooty younger sister?

NARRATOR #1: Hah! Snooty, you say? Snow White was the image of grace and purity. Rose, on the other hand, was not ladylike at all!

NARRATOR #2: Of course. Just because she didn't just wait around for some prince to save her you brush her off as unladylike.

NARRATOR #1: My apologies, dearest reader, for my younger colleague's outburst. You don't really want to hear about Rose, do you?

NARRATOR #2: Sure they do, see?

NARRATOR #1: Alright… If it's what the reader wants to hear. Once upon a time-

(In the Woods)

ROSE RED: Ugh, I can't believe our parents just dropped dead and left us with this piece of work they call the queen.

SNOW WHITE: Oh, dearest Rose, you mustn't speak of her that way!

ROSE: Whatever.

SNOW: I think it would be best if we tried our hardest to be meek and kind to whoever comes our way, so that we may enchant them, and-

ROSE: …right. You do that, I'm gonna go flirt with the huntsman.

SNOW: Gasp! (say "gasp" aloud) How can you say that Rose! He is a roguish man!

ROSE: Um he can be roguish with me as much as he likes!

SNOW: Dearest sister, what a vulgar thing to say?!

ROSE: Oh, save it.

(Transition Back to Narrators)

NARRATOR #1: Snow and Rose are chased out by the huntsman, much to the infatuated Rose's dismay. They come upon a small cottage and rest in the miniature beds they find in them. Let us observe as they are woken up by the petite forest dwellers who reside here.

NARRATOR #2: You mean dwarves?

NARRATOR #1: Hey, my story still!

(Dwarves House)

SNOW: (Delicate singing snoring)

ROSE: (Obnoxious snoring)

SNOW: (Slowly wakes up) Oh, hello sweet little creatures! I'm sorry my sister and I have infringed upon you like this! (Pause for Dwarves' response) Oh, I'm so glad you don't mind! Wake up dearest sister and meet our lovely new friends!

ROSE: (snoring cuts off) Huh- What? Ah! What are you garden gnomes doing here? I thought I had seen the last of you at that pie-eating contest.

SNOW: Oh, you never told me you competed! I would have loved to spend the day with-

ROSE: Anyway, I can't stay here with these guys. Me and Grumpy have too much… history, as you might say. I know a place near here I could go, but I think it's a little too rough-and-tumbly for a little princess like you though.

SNOW: If you think that is what's best, dearest sister. (Sniffling) I just- What if we never see each other again?

ROSE: I'll be better off then. Goodbye.

(Snow by herself)

SNOW: How can I express my true sorrows? Perhaps a longing ballad? (humming) Someday my prince will come…

ROSE: Shut up!

(Back to Narrator #1)

NARRATOR #1: Rose and Snow are separated for months. And yet, Snow White is ever forgiving and invites her falsely beloved sister to her wedding. Let us join them as they reunite!

(In front of a castle)

SNOW: Oh, I am so glad you came! I've been excited for you to meet my fiance…

(both say fiance at the same time)

ROSE: Your fiance. Right. I find it ironic that someone like you goes off and has a shotgun wedding with some guy who kissed her corpse.

SNOW: Shotgun? No, I assure you that our relationship has been nothing but pure. He is simply my true love!

ROSE: Right. Well, let me tell you something right now. You can pretend to be all sweet and loving, but I know you're nothing but a stuck-up snob. And you haven't made any effort at all to talk to me ever since you stayed with those dwarves. And yet you expect me to come crawling back at your stupid fairy-tale wedding!

SNOW: Stop it! Sister, I'm afraid this has gone far enough! I order you to leave the castle grounds.

ROSE: What?! You can't do that to me!

SNOW: Leave or you will be escorted out by the guards!

ROSE: (Being dragged away) Ahh! Let go of me! You'll regret this!!!

(Transition back to Narrators)

NARRATOR #1: And here our story comes to a close. Snow White bravely faced down her wicked sister and lived happily ever after. Rose, on the other hand, lived the rest of her treasonous life as an outcast and a hag. Now, do you see what I am talking about?

NARRATOR #2: Now wait a minute! That is nowhere near what happened. Let me tell you what really happened. Please, reader?

NARRATOR #1: Fine. But, I'm sure the truth will be clear in the end.

NARRATOR #2: Once upon a time-

(In the woods somewhere)

SNOW: I can't believe that-

ROSE: Our parents died? I know, but they died doing what they loved. It'll be okay-

SNOW: No, not that. What I meant was that I am forced to work the castle grounds like a common peasant girl!

ROSE: Eh, could be worse. I don't really mind.

SNOW: Of course, you would like it, simple Rose. While you work on your peasant duties, I'll go and wait for a prince to arrive and save me, as a true princess does.

ROSE: Uh, no. You will not leave me cleaning here while you get to sit around!

SNOW: Nonsense! It is my duty as the fair sister to be a ray of beauty that calls forth my true love to save me from this mess!

ROSE: My dear sister, love should be the last thing on your mind right now. Our parents just died, remember?

SNOW: Hmph! Don't lecture me about love! I saw you making googly eyes at that foul huntsman character!

ROSE: I was not! (sigh) Isn't he dreamy, though?

SNOW: (to herself) I can't believe I'm being forced to keep such disgusting company.

ROSE: I'm right here, you know.

(Back to Narrators)

NARRATOR #2: And would ya look at that? Isn't Snow White the snobbiest-

NARRATOR #1: A-hEM?

NARRATOR #2: Right. Well, anyway, they get chased out because Miss Snow has to go around talking about how fair she is and gets the queen all mad. They find this abandoned house in the woods and stay there for the night and wake up to the dwarves. Shall we?

(Dwarves cottage)

SNOW: (Snoring but annoyingly)

ROSE: (sleeping normally)

SNOW: (waking up) What the- How rude of you to wake me from my beauty sleep! I need at least 8 hours to maintain my perfect complexion and you've cut me short by 15 minutes! (pause for dwarves response) What do you mean, this is your house?! Do you know who you are speaking to?

ROSE: (waking) What going on? Hey wait a second, I know you! (to Snow) Yeah, I met them at the annual pie-eating contest!

SNOW: Pie-eating? I must have underestimated what horrid company you keep.

ROSE: Sorry guys, ignore her. How can we pay you back?

SNOW: Us pay them back?! They should be paying me! I have blessed their little meaningless lives with my presence!

ROSE: Again, so sorry. We better be off now!

SNOW: Hmph! I'm not going anywhere with you! I'm staying put. These ugly little forest thingies will see to my safety here.

ROSE: Are you out of your mind?! I'm not leaving you here alone with seven men!

SNOW: How dare you suggest that I would let myself be taken advantage of!

ROSE: That's not how it- (sigh) I can sense this is not an argument I can win. I'm leaving.

(Back to Narrator #2)

NARRATOR #2: So Snow is stubborn and stays with the dwarves, she gets kissed in her coffin, and Rose receives an invitation to the wedding. She hopes that the months away might have changed her snobby younger sister, but it is clear not much has changed…

(In front of a castle)

ROSE: Hey, Snow! Long time no-

SNOW: Eeek! Guards, get this nasty-looking rat creature away from me!

ROSE: Really? Woooow.

SNOW: Oh, I know you. I can't believe I didn't recognize your signature stench.

ROSE: Look, why bother inviting me if you're just going to insult me the whole time?

SNOW: I wanted to prove myself right. Look at all that I have! A kingdom, a prince, I am adored by all!

ROSE: ...Snow, are you happy?

SNOW: I- well... How could I not be? I have the prince!

ROSE: Alright. Well, I wish you a good marriage then. I don't have the energy to argue with you about who's right anymore. Goodbye.

(Back to Narrators)

NARRATOR #2: Rose took the high ground and didn't just throw herself at the first man passing by! Now, do you see?

NARRATOR #1: Hah! Simply ridiculous. The way you twisted around Snow's character was abominable!

NARRATOR #2: Oh, you wanna talk about twisting things?!

NARRATOR #1: I can't believe you. You are an idiotic, ignorant, unlovable little ankle-biter! I should teach you a lesson so you will shut up and STOP! NARRATOR #2: Yada yada yada. All you do is hurl accusations around and act like you're a little fancypants princess like your beloved Snow White. I wish you would just STOP! (Said at the same time both ending and stopping at the same time)

(Both Stop)

NARRATOR #2: Look at us! What are we doing?!

NARRATOR #1: I haven't a clue what you are doing, but I am making a point!

NARRATOR #2: Look, we don't have to agree, but I'm sure arguing like children is not going to prove either of our points. Now, why don't we just… have a truce?

NARRATOR #1: I guess in this one instance you are correct. (They shake hands.) Would you like an apple? As a sign of our… mutual respect.

NARRATOR #2: Sure, thanks! (bite) Wait a minute- (Faint)

NARRATOR #1: (Evil Chuckle) And Snow White lived happily ever after!
