Barbara's Wedding

By Daniel Stern

We see Jerry looking out the window with binoculars.

MOLLY: (Pg 10) Oh, Jerry, don't. Put those away. Tou can't do that!

JERRY: I'm not bothering anybody.

MOLLY: That's ridiculous. Just ignore them.

JERRY: They can't see me . . . Oh my god. . . Henry Kissinger!

MOLLY: What about Henry Kissinger?

JERRY: Henry Kissinger just popped out of a limousine about four feet in front of me. What is he doing at Barbra Streisand's wedding? I thought she was a Democrat.

JERRY: (Pg 13+) Oh, my God! [Molly], come here! Come here come here come here!!

MOLLY: What is it?

JERRY: You have got to look at this!

MOLLY: Jerry, please!

JERRY: Come on! This is important!

MOLLY: Okay! (She comes to the window) What?

JERRY: Is that . . . Gwyneth Paltrow?

FOR EDUCATION USE ONLY

MOLLY: Gwyneth Paltrow? Jesus Christ, Jerry! Gwyneth Paltrow!

JERRY: Is that her?!

MOLLY: Okay . . . what about her?

JERRY: Nothing, it's just. . . why does she get to go to?

MOLLY: Because Jerry, she was invited.

JERRY: I'm just curious that's all . . . I want to know just how famous do you have to be to be invited? I mean I saw Ed Begley going in.

MOLLY: So?

JERRY: So I mean, come on. Ed Begley? . . . I was Mr. Marvin on "Everything's Peachy."

MOLLY: That show ended eight years ago.

JERRY: They show is on every night --

MOLLY: -- at midnight on The Nostalgia Network--

JERRY: --and I'm the fourth one billed. That's go to be at least as good as Ed Bedley . . . Where is the line of fame that one needs to cross, in order to be invited? That's all I'm asking.

MOLLY: I seriously doubt Barbra Streisand is a huge fan of the "Everything's Peachy" re-runs. I mean, come on!

JERRY: Well, what 'bout what's-his-name, James Brolin?

MOLLY: He's the groom.

JERRY: Well, even so . . . (Continues to look out window)

MOLLY: I think working at your fathers plant is going to be good for you . . . you really need to get out of the house more.

JERRY: I'm just doing it for a week while my brother takes his vacation. Five days, that's it.

MOLLY: Your dad said you can have a job there any time you want.

JERRY: Are you kidding me?

MOLLY: It's good to have something to do.

JERRY: That would be real good for my mental health. Spend all day, every day with my father and brother, selling and breathing concrete, while they rub it in my face how "I got too big for my britches." And how they always knew I would end up back there.

MOLLY: All I'm saying is that it might be better than sitting here, waiting for the phone to ring.

Jerry completely oblivious of what molly just said continues to look out the window

JERRY: I don't believe this. How are we supposed to live like this?

MOLLY: It's just for a day—

JERRY: The one day they stop construction next door and we could have a little piece and quiet is the day we get the helicopters and traffic.

MOLLY: Well, I feel bad for them. I mean they are practically going to have to shout "I promise to have and to hold" at the top of their lungs just to be heard.

JERRY: Well, why don't they just get married somewhere else like Las Vegas or something . . . like normal people.

MOLLY: She's not going to get married in Las Vegas. That's not her style.

JERRY: Her style?

MOLLY: Everybody gets married in a style.

JERRY: We didn't. We got married in the woods behind my parents' house.

MOLLY: Exactly. We got married in the "we can't afford a wedding so we're just surrounding ourselves with nature and with our loved ones" style.

JERRY: We had no choice it was that or a synagogue.

MOLLY: So, we chose the woods behind your parents' house and it was absolutely beautiful and perfect. That was our style.

JERRY: That was our style because we had no money and you weren't Jewish.

MOLLY: Don't say that.

JERRY: Well, you weren't.

MOLLY: We were married by a rabbi.

JERRY: He was barely a rabbi anyway.

MOLLY: Barely a rabbi?

JERRY: He didn't even do it in Hebrew. The whole thing was in English.

MOLLY: I liked that.

JERRY: Why?

MOLLY: Because we don't speak Hebrew.

JERRY: So?

MOLLY: So he did the ceremony in English so we could understand it.

JERRY: We're not supposed to understand it. It's supposed to be in Hebrew just like it has been for thousands of years.

MOLLY: Well, we speak English.

JERRY: That's not the point.

MOLLY: What's the point then?

JERRY: The point is the tradition of doing the same for all those years and not making it convenient.

MOLLY: Don't you think if you're taking a vow you should understand what you're vowing?

JERRY: It's not about taking a vow.

MOLLY: It's not?

JERRY: No.

MOLLY: How can you say that?

JERRY: Because it's not. It's about the ceremony. It's about doing it in front of other people, not about what we specifically vowed to do. We just repeated whatever he said.

MOLLY: Did you mean the vows you made to me at our wedding?

JERRY: I think I did, but I don't know. There was a lot going on.

MOLLY: You weren't paying attention at our wedding?

JERRY: There was a lot going on! I mean, I had just come from an audition.

MOLLY: . . . You came from an audition?

JERRY: Yeah… you knew about it.

MOLLY: You went to an audition, on our wedding day?

JERRY: Yes. I told you about that. It was like three hours before the wedding.

MOLLY: Oh my god.

JERRY: It was a real good scene too, where I'm yelling at the older brother, "I'm real! I'm as real as a two-dollar bill!" which is really great line for the character, because a two dollar bill is real but it's rare—

MOLLY: You can remember the lines from a movie that you weren't even in . . . but you can't remember your wedding vows? The promises for a life together that we made to each other at our wedding!

JERRY: It was a crazy and confusing day and all I'm saying is that if the rabbi would've said, "Do you promise to drink your milk and eat your vegetables" you would have said, "I do" to that also.

MOLLY: No, I wouldn't have.

JERRY: Of course, you would.

MOLLY: I'm lactose intolerant, Jerry! I'm not going to vow to drink milk!

JERRY: You can't remember what you vowed.

MOLLY: I vowed to love you until I die! I vowed to stay with you until I die . . . I vowed to make you happy . . . to make a home together! And I promised that even though we are not bound by blood, that you are my family. Forever. No matter what!

JERRY: Okay . . . but you didn't mean it.

MOLLY: What?!

JERRY: You didn't mean it.

MOLLY: Yes, I did, Jerry! And to refresh your memory you promised the exact same things. We said the exact same words that day. I meant what I said, Jerry. Did you? (Long pause) You know...I'm not even sure we are legally married.

JERRY: That's ridiculous.

MOLLY: I mean we made a verbal contract at the wedding but if you were in an altered state of mind, I don't know if in the eyes of the courts, not to mention the eyes of God, that our contract is valid.

JERRY: Of course, we're married.

MOLLY: You know what? Fine. Maybe I'll go over to my sisters for awhile.

JERRY: Don't you dare.

MOLLY: Why not? It might be good. A little break.

JERRY: Don't you dare leave with all those reporters out there.

MOLLY: OH MY GOD!

JERRY: You will not embarrass me in front of the national press.

MOLLY: Is that what you care about? Not that your wife IS LEAVING YOU, but that people might see?

JERRY: So what?!

MOLLY: Oh my god! That's it! It's official. You are pathetic!

JERRY: I'm pathetic? I'm pathetic! What does that make you?!

MOLLY: It makes me sick! I can't stand being around you anymore! The world does not focus on you!

JERRY: No the world is focused on BARBRA FRICKING STREISAND!
