Lion and Blue

By Robert Vavra

INTRODUCTION

There's only one kind of love that can fill us up, make us whole, and give us the happiness we all want: unconditional love or Real Love. This is the story of a lonely lion and a blue butterfly. You see, love comes in all shapes, sizes and colors. It is not bound by gender or age. True love conquers all. Lion and Blue by Robert Vavra

My lonely roars echoed far in a jungle
that was old
to me, a lion
in the winter
of his years,
whose heart
had never known spring.

Until that afternoon when in the darkness of silent thoughts

4NG Fanatics

my yellow eyes were dazzled
blue.

Suddenly blossoms
lit this dull stare
when you,
brilliant,
beautiful, Brazilian
butterfly drifted into my life.

Blue became . . .
Blue was my love,
my
life,
my all around.

Happiness was a spring and summer that seemed could never turn to fall.
though you told me,

'Someday,
Lion,
the time will come when I will have to leave you,
in search of the flower
of
the sun.'

Those thoughts made me want to shut my ears
or roar away
a destiny
which threatened
our happy voyage across the sea of
love.

The other butterflies clustered round my
head,
and off somewhere
I heard a lioness
call,

4NG Fanatics

but in my world,
my sky,
there was only
you
my bella
Blue.

One night you left me, Blue,
in search of your golden destiny.

Then there was no world for me.
Endless years
I awaited your return.

But our boat drifted past as empty as my heart.
And so my quest
began,
I sailed to places
far away.

In search of you
I wandered
far,
and all the while I thought,
'Why could we not have met
when the time
was right,
when youth had lit
my stars.'

'But yesterday is over,' whispered the far-seeing giraffe,
'as tomorrow is yet to come.'

'The only time
that is ever
right,' rumbled the wise elephant,
'is
n o w,
so make haste,

4NG Fanatics

this journey of yours is a one way trip eternally.'

As I climbed the grass
towards the clouds,
a yellow blossom
appeared.
Could it be your destiny
Would you be there,
oh Blue?

'This flower is the leopard's.' came the cheetah's voice,
'it sprang from the garden of his soul.
You won't find the love of which you speak until your roots have grown strong, grown deep.'

In the dark of night or in the flame of morning sky

often hope would awaken in my heart
with the flashing
of blue wings.
But feathers covered
them
and not your brilliance.

Then one day
on the plain's edge,
where the wind blows
fast and clean,
a wart hog came trotting by,
a daisy in his mouth,
and as he passed
I heard these words,

White and straight
stood a daisy proudly at the field's edge.
'Come among us,'
beckoned the simple
flower.
And so I strode

4NG Fanatics

through that meadow
of
honey and snow.
Then,
not the tawny lioness's purrrrr
or the tides
of oceans
could take me from my course.

But no blossom of the sun was there.
'The brilliant flower you seek,'
lulled the daisies
'is springing now
from your lion's heart.'
And as rich pollen
covered me,
golden petals crowned
my head.

Centuries,
years,
days . . .
how many passed,
I don't know.
But born again was I
when in the evening sky
a dot of blue appeared against the moon.

And as the sky
oranged
with break of day,
I saw you
Blue.
But to me
why come when your search had been for that golden blossom
who by now
your heart

4NG Fanatics

had surely won?

'Lion, Lion!'
Dreams do
come true.
You dared,
you hoped,
you believed,
and for doing so look what you've become

My
Golden
Maned
Flower
Hero
Of
The Sun!'

And n o w . . .
Blue!
Blue!
brilliant,
bella, Brazilian
butterfly,

4NG Fanatics

again my life,
my all around
is
you.

SOURCE INFORMATION

Author: Robert Vavra
ISBN: 978-0688611644 Publisher: William Morrow and Company Date (Month/Year): Oct 1974

AWARD HISTORY

Colorado State Qualifier

FOR EDUCATIONAL USE ONLY