Urges

By Poetri

INTRODUCTION

The tantrums of a child who has no self-control can test even the most patient parent. However, when you're trapped in a crowded grocery store, making intense eye contact with a stranger during a meltdown or at a family dinner where everyone is pretending not to notice, these fits can be . . . socially devastating.

But don't despair! These delightful toddler explosions can become slightly less frequent. Your child only needs to learn self-control instead of launching straight into chaos like a tiny, screaming banshee. Simple, right?

(on the brink of losing control) Right! Children should learn self-control, but sometimes . . . sometimes even adults just can't control the -- Urges by Poetri

(Pg 153-156) I have the urge to jump over the counter at McDonalds and make my own Chicken McNuggets.
Cause I'm tired of telling them that I want them fresh and I'll wait the five minutes and they still give me some hot, nasty, microwave, re-cooked ones!

I have the right mind to slap the lady that tells me,
"They are fresh." No, they're aren't!
Don't you ever have the urge to just punch people?
Sometimes for no reason, but especially when they do or say something stupid.
Too bad, I think sometimes, that my nice body doesn't react to my mind's first reactions.

Cause whenever I walk into a library,
I have the urge to start yelling.
Then I wanna punch the first person that tells me,
"Shhhh, this is a library."
Like I don't know!
I have this cruel urge to slap anyone that says libary. It's a library!

I have this weird urge to walk into Supercuts and demand
a haircut,
even though I know they don't cut black folk hair.

My urges are mean. They're like my evil twin.
Like I have the urge to go grab that booty right there.
Everyone who knows me, knows I would never do that, though.
I have the drive to go rob a bank on broke days or go steal some money out of a cash register on some days.
Thank God I would never actually do that.
Yet, am I criminal for thinking criminal thoughts?

I have the urge to go stand on the 405 freeway and hold my hand up and see how many cars I can get to stop.
I have the urge to get hit by one of those cars to see who would come to my funeral.
Just cause I have the desire to find out who really loves me. . . do you?

Am I the only one? Do other people think about doing things that they would never do?
Am I the only one that says to myself. . . What if?
What if I did this? What if I did that?

4NG Fanatics

What if I stood in the middle of the Beverly Center buck naked?

Okay, maybe you don't think that and maybe that was just a little too much information, but you know what am I saying.
What if we all acted out our urges?
I'd be dead or in jail, right now, or in insane asylum with Unsane.
Trying to refrain from thinking that I'm on the Midnight train to Georgia, with Glady's Knight and one Pip, with a busted lip, and a messed up hip, still talking 'bout that trip on the Midnight, man, we done flipped it if we acted out our impulses.

I have the urge to keep rhyming like that.
I have the urge to become a cop so that I can arrest other cops.
I have the itch to tell the IRS that they can keep calling and sending mail, but

I'm not gonna pay them the money I owe until I get the money.
I have the longing to tell telemarketers to kiss my a!
I have the urge to splurge, no work, just play all day,
walk around cussing all day,
but I can't do that. I won't do that.
I'm a full fledge Christian. At least I try to be.
That doesn't mean I don't have urges.
That doesn't mean I don't slip and fall sometimes. . . okay a lot of times.
I have the urge to slap people that criticize us when we do fall.
When we fall victims to our urges, our desires, our sins.

Not all my urges are bad and cruel and senseless.
I have some nice urges, some sad urges, things I need to do urges, things I want to believe urges.
Like I have the urge to believe that things really happen like they do in the movies.
Soon as I step out of the movie theater, reality erases that urge.

4NG Fanatics

I have the urge to ask you out.
Shyness always blocks that one.
The urge to cry in public,
my manhood bullies that away.
The urge to sing. . .
Yolanda Adams or Kurt Carr and the Kurt Carr singers.
I usually act on this urge and don't let me put Michael Jackson in the walkman.

Urges are a funny thing. Can you judge a man by his urges?
If so, then I am a pretty weird guy, leading a double life.
But, I don't think so, urges are what they are.
Quick thoughts thrown at our brain from whichever angle.
When we decide to act on these urges good or bad, then we become them.
Most of us rationalize and think.
And thank GOD that most of us don't act on all of all urges.
