Collapse the Economy and Book of Rules . . .

By Megan Falley, Olivia Gatwood and Nomy Lamm

INTRODUCTION

We women have been on diets for a while now. We know all the fashion and make-up tips and have read countless articles about being "the goddess" and "feminine power."

Yet we still feel insecure, distrustful of our bodies, and frequently sabotage ourselves by taking on too much. We are women and it's time to cancel that gym membership and throw away those self-help articles!

Did you know that studies predict that if women stopped buying cosmetic products and services, every economy in the world would collapse overnight. This is a call to . . . Collapse the Economy by Megan Falley and Olivia Gatewood

Collapse the Economy

Let's cover our scented tampons in hairspray, light them on fire,
and throw them at Maybelline's headquarters.

4NG Fanatics

Let's take all our leftover lotions and soaps and make the world's largest slip-n-slide down Capitol Hill.

Weight Watchers will have a whole new meaning, like, just wait and watch as I burn this place down.

Imagine — what could we do with all these Spanx?
Probably make some sort of catapult to launch our skin-softening bath bombs into enemy territory.

Victoria's Secret? Is that she's GOING OUT OF BUSINESS.

I have picked at my body like a scab.
I have squeezed at my face in the mirror until no more me could come out of me.

I changed my outfit eight times before I got here.

Oh you thought we were gonna stop at burning bras?
Well then you shouldn't have given us so much flammable shit.

Tampons, pads, even you Diva Cups, will be a thing of the past. Tonight, we paint the town red.

Are you gonna put those fake eyelashes on for me?
No? Then I don't want them.

Does that shampoo also come with the photoshop you used on the model? No? Then I don't want it.

Here's to you, Summer's Eve.
I'd rather NOT smell

like Island Splash or Delicate Blossom because what does that even smell like?

That's not even a real scent.
I'm already vajazzled enough.

Let's throw out our razors and grow our hair as long as rivers.

How beautiful it will be to take the money I spend to be pretty for you, make my hair soft for you, my nails like candy for you, give myself skin cancer for you,

go under the knife for you and stop giving the 76 cents back.

There were days i spent hours crying in the dressing room. Days I didn't leave the house in case someone had a camera for fear of becoming another before picture.

So thank you, Cosmo for giving me 472 more beauty tips to completely ignore.

Thank you for all of this lipstick to write I AM FLAWLESS on the wall.

Thank you for the cover up,
the vanishing cream.

Thank you for making us invisible that way, you'll never see us coming.

TRANSITION

We are dedicated, talented, brilliant women. Most of the time, we don't know our brilliance. We are certain we "aren't ready" to take on that next bigger role. We are more attuned to the ways we aren't qualified than to the ways that we are. We wait for someone to validate, promote or discover us. Sound familiar? That's because we've been coached by our society and have learned the . . . Book of Rules: A Girls Guide to Doing What You're Told by Nomy Lamm

Part 1.

you don't get to decide what you are what happens is, you are nothing, and then you pop out and the doctor says "boy" or else "girl" and that's that.
for the rest of your life you are trying to be "boy" or else "girl."

if you are very lucky, you will be called a man and you will feel like a man and everyone else will think you are a man and you will do all the things that real men are supposed to do and you will score lots of chicks.
then you will be on top of the world, the pinnacle of success, a very powerful person. this is a catch-22 though,
because if you are called a man and you feel like a man and everyone thinks you are a man and you do all the things that real men are supposed to do, then chances are you are a ahole [jerk] and i hate you.

if you are called a woman and you feel like a woman and everyone else thinks of you as a woman and you do all the things that real women are supposed to do, then you are probably miserable.

if, like most people, you lie somewhere in between or beyond, then you are also probably miserable.
(tough life.)

Part 2.

The First Thing You Have to Do if You Want to Be a Woman Is Be Pretty.

this is simple.
To be pretty, all you need is to fulfill at least three of these requirements:
(a) a great tan; (b) long legs (two of them); (c) blonde; (d) perky t [gesture to chest];
(e) button nose; (f) smooth skin; (g) slender waist;

4NG fanatics

(h) stare dumbly;
(i) you are a doll; (j) a shimmery lipgloss; (k) a can of diet coke;
(l) a short skirt; (m) be on television okay, count your points.

don't worry if you didn't quite make it being pretty is all in the mind.
do this exercise:
every night before you go to sleep,
look in the mirror and say
"please god, you can take away all my friends and family, make me into a moron,
send me to hell when i die, just please,
make me as beautiful as tori spelling."
if you don't want to look like tori spelling then too bad for you because it doesn't work any other way.
when you wake up you will be pretty.

Part 3.

your body is a whole entire beautiful magical universe of its own, exactly right and perfect.

i know that this is not what you have been taught, but it is

The Truth.

how could anything so incredible ever be denigrated, scoffed at, invaded, discounted, spat on, violated, ridiculed?

your body is magic.

what you are thinking now is:

why was i told to look at charts, diagrams, scales and teen magazines to tell me what is wrong with me?

why wasn't i told to trust myself?

why did they make me feel like a horrifying ugly pathetic puking loathsome monster, if the truth is that i am magic?

as woman, you must learn to identify as an object.

you must learn to be objectified, made ugly and disgusting,

but not in a way that is powerful or frightening to them-

you will be made ugly in a putrid, rotting way.

4NG Fanatics

your soul is the first to rot.

then your heart, then your mind, then your flesh . . .

whatever is left is the magical part that will live forever.

this is the part of you that is eternal.

your silicone implants.
